SPORT HEALTH

Sport Health is SMA's quarterly magazine for both members and the general public. Sport Health covers the latest issues in sports medicine and science, sports injury prevention and physical activity promotion. Articles in Sport Health provide information and insights into the ways in which research has informed practice and approaches of support staff in sport and increased the skills and performance of athletes. On a practical level, Sport Health articles also explain the ways this information is used to improve the health and well-being of the whole community.
